Zack at 6.5 years

Zack has been the best addition to not only my breeding program but to our family. He is a very loving bernese with a heart to please. He does not possess a high prey drive but is very protective of our family and his home, especially if I am gone. His get seem to have inherited his sweet lovely manner. Some say if they could be inside you they would be close enough.

His overall health has been good. He did have a mast cell tumor removed in 2006. He also had a brush with death in summer 2004 with severe heat exhaustion and dehydration. He was obsessed with a girl and worked himself almost to death by pacing and panting in the sun for several hours while I was gone. Luckily we were able to save him but his lung was permanently scarred in one lobe. He does show some signs of aging in his spine. The formation of a bone spur is appearing in the T4-T5 vertebrae. His elbows and shoulders still look great. He has never had a hot spot or any other skin issue. He maintains a lovely full coat without much fuss. He is not difficult to feed except when the girls are in season and then only when they are ready to be bred. His bite is correct and full. He has produced some missing teeth with a common Swedish line I have.

Zack has helped improve bone, coat, eye color and shape. He has produced some nice fronts and top-lines with most bitches. Rear angulations has been diverse with some very angulated rears and some not straight but not as angulated. Movement seems to be acceptable with some outstanding. He does not possess or produce big open side gait. He has plenty of neck but it is masked by a big mature male mane around his neck.
